Copyright of the Physical Therapist Clinical Performance Instrument Web (PT CPI Web) and Physical Therapist Assistant Clinical Performance Instrument Web (PTA CPI Web) are owned by the American Physical Therapy Association (APTA). Any person who infringes APTA’s copyright shall be subject to criminal liability in accordance with § 506 (criminal offense) of Title 17 and § 2319 (criminal infringement of a copyright) of Title 18 of the United States Code. Please contact APTA with questions about CPI copyright.

PUBLICATIONS

- How do I obtain permission to use PT CPI Web and/or PTA CPI Web in a work that I’m preparing for publication?
  - Submit a written request to APTA stating the specific content that you wish to use and the purpose for its use. Each request is considered on a case-by-case basis. APTA will then provide written approval, along with applicable commercial-use fees, or denial of its use.

- How do I cite PT CPI Web in a work that I’m preparing?

- How do I cite PTA CPI Web in a work that I’m preparing?

PUBLIC DOMAIN

- Are PT CPI Web and PTA CPI Web in the public domain?
  - No, they are copyrighted instruments of APTA.

- Copies of CPI have been posted in public areas of academic institutional websites. Is this permitted?
  - No, posting the instruments in portion or in full, for any reason, in public areas on any website (not in a secure, password-protected area) is not permitted.
  - As institutions may not be aware of the copyright violation, please provide APTA with a link to the websites, so we may contact the institutions to have them remove CPI from public access.

Reproductions, modifications, or derivatives of CPI without APTA’s permission constitutes an infringement of copyright. Contact permissions@apta.org.

Revised: June 6, 2019
CPI Copyright FAQs

WEB-BASED VERSUS PRINT VERSIONS OF PT CPI / PTA CPI

- If CAPTE-accredited academic institutions choose to use PT CPI or PTA CPI, are they expected to use the web-based versions?
  - Yes, the web-based CPIs are the most up-to-date versions.

- May I use a print copy of the 1997 or 2006 CPI for student evaluation purposes, local clinical education manuals, or other reasons?
  - No.

- May I print CPI for my personal use?
  - Yes, 1 copy of web CPI may be printed for personal review purposes only.
    Note: The printout may not be used for student assessment purposes or to share.

- Our clinic supervises foreign-trained clinicians and students. Do we use the web-based CPI to perform their evaluations?
  - No, foreign-trained clinicians and students supervised by clinics in the US should use the 1997 paper instrument. The cost is $50. Contact APTA to purchase a copy.

SHARING AND CLINICAL EDUCATION MANUALS

- May we include portions of CPI Web in our clinical education manual or syllabi?
  - With APTA permission, CPI Web users may describe CPI components (eg, sample behaviors and descriptions, performance dimension chart, rating scale, anchors chart), if the program’s manual or syllabi is posted online in a secure, password-protected area of the academic institution’s intranet and is not shared in print.

ABILITY TO MODIFY

- May I use specific portions only of CPI Web (eg, for short clinical rotations)?
  - No. Validity and reliability are preserved only when used in their entirety and not altered or modified in any way, and only when used in accordance with the instructions that accompany them.