

Jill S. Boissonault, PT, PhD

Board-Certified Clinical Specialist in Women's Health Physical Therapy

APTA spokeswoman Jill S. Boissonault, PT, PhD, is associate professor at George Washington University's Physical Therapy Program where she teaches professional issues, service learning, women's health, and is part of the clinical-case conference team. She teaches continuing education seminars in women's health physical therapy on musculoskeletal management of obstetrics clients and pelvic floor dysfunction. She is a board-certified clinical specialist in women's health physical therapy. She is past president and founder of the International Organization of Physical Therapists in Women's Health, a subgroup of the World Confederation for Physical Therapy (WCPT). She received a bachelor of science degree in physical therapy from the University of Illinois, a master's degree in orthopedic physical therapy from Northwestern University, and a PhD from the University of Wisconsin–Madison in curriculum and instruction, with a minor in women's studies. She's held various leadership positions within APTA, including treasurer of the OB/GYN Section (now the Section on Women's Health) from 1983-1989, vice president from 1995-1999, and education director from 2005-2006. She received APTA's Lucy Blair Service Award and Elizabeth Noble Award, Wisconsin Physical Therapy Association Mentor of the Year Award, and WCPT's International Service Award. She is author of numerous professional articles and textbook chapters.

Contact: Erin Wendel at [erinwendel@apta.org or 703/706-3397]